Tattoo with an edge

After all, surfing around the web had to lead to this too... The recent news about what a famous US car manufacturer (we won't say the name...) decided to do with its new 2011 car models certainly turned a few heads. Basically, the famous car manufacturer will give its future customers decorative car decals (to stick to the doors probably) that represent the geometric and stylistic shapes of a real tattoo... And the gadgets will not come in just a few samples but in over two hundred different models to meet all tastes and requests. Of course such news doesn't make us jump with joy but clearly says a lot about how the vision of tattoo is increasingly distorted and exploited at top management levels. But, stickers aside, things aren't exactly like this. Tattoo is still something fresh and widely present in the third millennium thanks to the fact that it hasn't become (and never will...) a "middle-class" gadget or harmless decoration for cars. Tattoo in fact is still very dangerous for society because it still expresses diversity and communicates what we really are to the world, our tastes, our desires and it does so using the most precious surface of all: human skin. All this said, we hope you enjoy this new issue of Tattoo Collection which, thanks to its 24 galleries dedicated to the most diverse subjects, is still the best way to find out as much as possible about the heterogeneous world of tattoo. Because, as you know, we prefer "old fashioned" methods. And between a sticker on a car speeding down the road and a great tattoo session in a tattoo studio, we know exactly what to choose to get first-hand info on this fascinating art...Enjoy!
