TIME

Stories from the sea

There are many stories behind a tattoo. Yes, sometimes a new piece is like a bottle thrown at sea with a message inside. A secret message that we would like people to read even though we don't know exactly who should read it...

This time the desire to tell the personal story that lies behind a tattoo is bigger than ever. The news comes from France, and in Paris last June "Karl" performed the first interactive tattoo in history, live on Facebook. Some already called it animated tattoo because inside the Oriental design done on an entire arm, there was an icon, more precisely a QR code. This is a figure that if photographed with a new generation mobile phone can direct us to a specific web address.

If you place an iPhone right on the tattoo you are directed to a page where you can see animated items as if they belonged to the tattoo.

Is this a real innovation? Who knows... It seems that tattoos are changing their skin and that the marks we wear have more and more things to say.

Maybe one day our tattoo will be able to carry us into a virtual dimension, so we can navigate through virtual worlds. They will be our doors of perception, to use Aldous Huxley's words. The front door towards a hidden world of ourselves...
