Thoughts, words and tattoos

Communicating signifies entering into relationships with others, which these days are a rare thing. Communication has always been one of man's primary needs. To satisfy the desire to communicate man devised a system of codes. One of these is the language code, rich and complex, and which is continually evolving. At the same time visual language developed, which has always played a fundamental role, together with verbal and written language for extra impact. The goal is always the same: recognition and deep understanding between individuals. Our readers know too well that tattooing is a special code, used by people to express themselves and what is happening in their lives. Some are very mysterious, secret legacies from distant lands: the traditional Siberian tattoo, for example, started during the pre-Russian, pre-Christian era and is rich with single symbols which can only be understood when seen in relation to one another in a complex system. In the same way as language, images are used to transmit information using specific signs, with the same specific rules for use. When we are trying to convey a message that we want to be clear and not misunderstood, do we not try to choose our words extremely carefully when expressing our thoughts? We take care to adapt them to the listener in front of us and we end up using even more words, to try to explain more clearly the message we are trying to convey. The same attention to detail should be used in the choice of images that we choose to display with pride, permanent messages, unmistakable and precious with which we introduce ourselves to others in much the same way as a business card.

Our galleries should be a source of inspiration, education and guidance, to throw light upon an art form that has a heart and soul. Biomechanics, mystics, geometrics or Chicanos? And as for the subjects: why choose an insect as opposed to a key or an eagle? Anything goes, provided it depicts you. Once again we are proud to be able to offer you a fabulous collection of real tattoos, which show the power of a symbol and its capacity to shape entire worlds. Our hope is that these worlds know how to interact, unite and live peacefully together.
